

Dear FCC,

Please drop the considerations of overturning New Jersey's Do Not Call List. Before it was implemented we were hounded day and night by telemarketing calls. To compound matters, my wife is in the mid state of Alzheimer's Disease. Friends and doctors often had to leave messages on the recorder as I didn't want my wife answering and committing to something being offered. Finally I was forced to put in a second unpublished line just so we could communicate with people of our choosing. We are retired and living on a very close budget so the second line put another strain on the money for our survival. Since the law went into effect the calls have almost dropped to zero. It is a real joy to just pick up the phone again when it rings and there is someone we know on the line and not a telemarketer. If you are truly in your positions to represent the people of our great country, then please do not cave-in to the pressures of the telemarketing industry. Do you serve the few, or the many? Regards, Jerry D. Fowble
